Online learning: Individuals can sign up to begin studying six times a year. They are assigned a tutor who will support them throughout the course. Students access the resources online and can discuss issues in an online forum with other students in their cohort. Students need an internet connection and basic IT skills to access the study materials.

In-house: Groups of students from an organisation study a programme together under the guidance of a tutor. The tutor comes to the organisation and provides an induction and face-to-face study days. Assignments can be tailored to reflect current organisational issues. In-house courses require a minimum of 8 students.
